

	PAGE
H. Ireland.
Emigration from Ireland decreasing since 1860 . . . . .	215
Effects of land reform . . . . .	217
Welfare work of the country governments . . . . .	218
The co-operative movement . . . . .	218
Rise in wages of farm laborers . . . . .	218
Improvement of the condition of the people . . . . .	219
I. Conclusion: Immigration from Southern and Eastern Europe could not be replaced by immigration from Northern and Western Europe . . . . .	220

CHAPTER IX.

RACE SUICIDE.

General Walker's explanation of the decline in the native birth- rate: Native stock replaced by immigration . . . . .	221
Decline of the birth-rate begins in 1810-1830 . . . . .	223
A world-wide phenomenon . . . . .	224
Race suicide universal among social classes not affected by im- migrant competition . . . . .	224

CHAPTER X.

THE STANDARD OF LIVING.

A. Introductory: The subject of inquiry—comparative stand- ards of unskilled laborers, past and present . . . . .	228
B. Congestion in New York City.
Overcrowding and filth in the first half of the past century . . . . .	229
Squalid rooms of native American sewing women . . . . .	231
The shanty dwellers in the middle of the nineteenth century . . . . .	231
The Irish and German colonies in the 60's . . . . .	232
Improved conditions of the Jewish and Italian districts of our day . . . . .	234
Industrial causes of congestion . . . . .	235
Effect of congestion upon cost of living and wages . . . . .	240
C. Housing Conditions in the Country at Large.
Housing conditions of New England working girls in the 40's. . . . .	241
Filthy and unsanitary tenements in Boston in the days of the old immigration . . . . .	241
The same conditions in smaller towns . . . . .	243
Shanty dwellers in Massachusetts . . . . .	244