(p. 19), "Rabochaya Mysl," the most rabid organ of the Economists (1897-1902).

(p. 27), B-v was the pseudonym of B. V. Savinkov who was then a Social Democrat and a member of the Petersburg Fighting Union. While in exile Savinkov turned Narodnik (Populist) and joined the Socialist Revolutionries. In 1905 he joined the "Fighting Organization" ormed by the provocateur Azev. Practically every promnent terrorist act of the Socialist Revolutionaries in ecent times was inspired by Savinkov. During the war le was a rabid patriot; in 1917 he became the right hand if Kerensky, and after the October Revolution an active ounter-revolutionary in the pay of the French capitalists. p. 30), "Credo," the statement of fate of the Economists. p. 34), Zemlevoltzi. "Zemlia i Volia" (Land and Freelom) was an organization formed in 1876 by certain nonolitical rebels belonging to the Narodniki (Populists) vho believed that Socialism could be brought about hrough the instrumentality of the peasant village comnunes. In 1897 "Zemlia i Volia" split up into the "Nardovoltzi" and "Chernyperedeltzi." The group "Chernyi 'eredel" (General Division of Land) which did not reain in existence very long (it was from this group that he first Russian Marxists preceded—Plekhanov, Zaslitch and others, who in 1883 formed the first Social emocratic organization, "The Group for the Emancipaion of Labor") fought for the maintenance of the old actics. The group "Narodnaya Volia" (Popular Freeom) advocated the use of terrorism in the fight against he autocracy and its agents. It was at the orders of the xecutive Committee of the "Narodnaya Volia" that zar Alexander II was assassinated on March 1, 1881. 1 the 'eighties, the Czarist government with the aid of pies and provocateurs put an end to the "Narodovoltzi" s an active fighting revolutionary organization.

p. 37), Vera Zasulitch was formerly a member of the roup "Zemlia i Volia," then a member of the Marxian Group for the Emancipation of Labor" which was formed
