

need to understand more fully and sympathetically the human values involved in industrial operations. But the greater effort and the keener intelligence which employee representation demands is amply rewarded in the morale which it engenders.