

wise littera scripta manet—I have resisted all temptations to try to amend the articles, whether previously published or not. When I have suppressed the names of correspondents and others it is because I have feared that they might dislike either the publicity or my version, explicit or implied, of their views.

OXFORD.

June, 1927.