

offers the possibility of the development of a higher type than the European race has yet produced. This experiment should not be jeopardised by precipitate expansion for the temporary benefit of countries occupied by less far-seeing people.

¹ C. Close, "Population and Migration," "Geography," XIV, 1927, p. 23.

² The urgent need for extensive emigration from the South Wales coal-field was declared in "The Times" on the 10th of December, 1927.

³ Cf. p. III.

⁴ Cf. "Mon. Rec. Migr.," II, 1927, p. 212.

⁵ L. Stoddard, "Reforging America," 1927, p. 600. "Mon. Notes Migr.," No. 42, 1926, p. 88.