for whom no record of actual hours could be obtained. (Chart 5). In the seamless hosiery industry there was only one occupational group in which hours of work were reported for 100 or more employees (Appendix Table V).

Full time

There was more full-time work for both men and women in the full-fashioned hosiery industry than in the seamless hosiery industry. Men knitters and women seamers and menders in full-fashioned hosiery had the highest proportion of full-time work. In no other occupational group except in the miscellaneous classification did as many as one-half of the men and women work their regular scheduled hours.

Overtime

More overtime work was reported for men in the seamless than in the full-fashioned hosiery industry. Of the men more than one-fifth of the full-fashioned knitting helpers, maintenance, and miscellaneous workers worked more than their scheduled hours. There was no occupational group in the full-fashioned hosiery industry in which more than 10 per cent of the women worked in excess of their scheduled hours.
