

FOREWORD

The need for a more thorough study of the retail business in this country has been emphasized both by the International Chamber of Commerce and by the Agricultural Foundation of the United States. It is of course desirable to have a more complete understanding of the retail business in this country, and to secure as much as possible the services of business in the matter of retailing.

The retail trade constitutes a considerable portion of the total business of the United States. The number of retail stores is estimated to be over 1,000,000, and they do not operate in any one line of business. It is responsible, therefore, for a large part of the total business of the United States. It is a very important factor in the total business of the United States. It is a very important factor in the total business of the United States. It is a very important factor in the total business of the United States.

The International Chamber of Commerce has recognized the need for a more thorough study of the retail business in this country. It has established a committee to study the retail business in this country. It has established a committee to study the retail business in this country.

The Agricultural Foundation of the United States has also recognized the need for a more thorough study of the retail business in this country. It has established a committee to study the retail business in this country. It has established a committee to study the retail business in this country.

The need for a more thorough study of the retail business in this country is emphasized by the fact that the retail business is one of the most important factors in the total business of the United States. It is a very important factor in the total business of the United States. It is a very important factor in the total business of the United States.

October, 1920

International Chamber of Commerce